Louisiana is in the midst of one of the most consequential periods of policy reform in its modern history, and the economic results are proving the case. Capital investment is surging, transformational development projects are advancing and a state once defined by stagnation is now defined by momentum.

THAT MOMENTUM DID not happen by accident. It is the product of a deliberate, sustained effort by lawmakers, employers and stakeholders across Louisiana to leverage our state's extraordinary natural resources and advance the priorities outlined in LABI's LA Driven Strategic Plan, session after session, until reform becomes the rule rather than the exception.

With this legislative term now past its midpoint, 2026 was a test of resolve. The question was never whether Louisiana would continue moving forward. It was whether lawmakers would sustain the discipline required to capitalize on the opportunities now in front of us. The answer, in most respects, was yes.

Workforce development led the way. As Louisiana attracts historic investment, the success of every project depends on a workforce ready to meet the demand. Lawmakers responded with reforms expanding work-based learning, strengthening career training and introducing students to career pathways earlier than ever before, building the talent pipeline our employers are counting on.

On energy, lawmakers held the line. LABI championed an all-of-the-above strategy and worked alongside industry partners to defeat measures that would have injected uncertainty into a sector that has anchored Louisiana's economy for generations, while also advancing legislation to shield key industries from the kind of costly, predatory litigation that drives away jobs and investment.

Long-sought workers' compensation reform finally moved forward. While some proposals were narrowed in the legislative process, lawmakers approved measures LABI has championed for decades to modernize medical benefit delivery and improve transparency. These reforms represent concrete progress toward a system designed to get employees the care they need quickly and efficiently, so they can return to work without the costly legal delays that have plagued the current system for too long.

Still, the work is not finished. Louisiana's legal climate and insurance market remain in need of further reform if our state is to stay competitive with its neighbors and keep winning investment. This session served as a reminder that transformational change is not achieved in a single year, and LABI remains committed to advancing those conversations and pursuing solutions that strengthen our state's economic future.

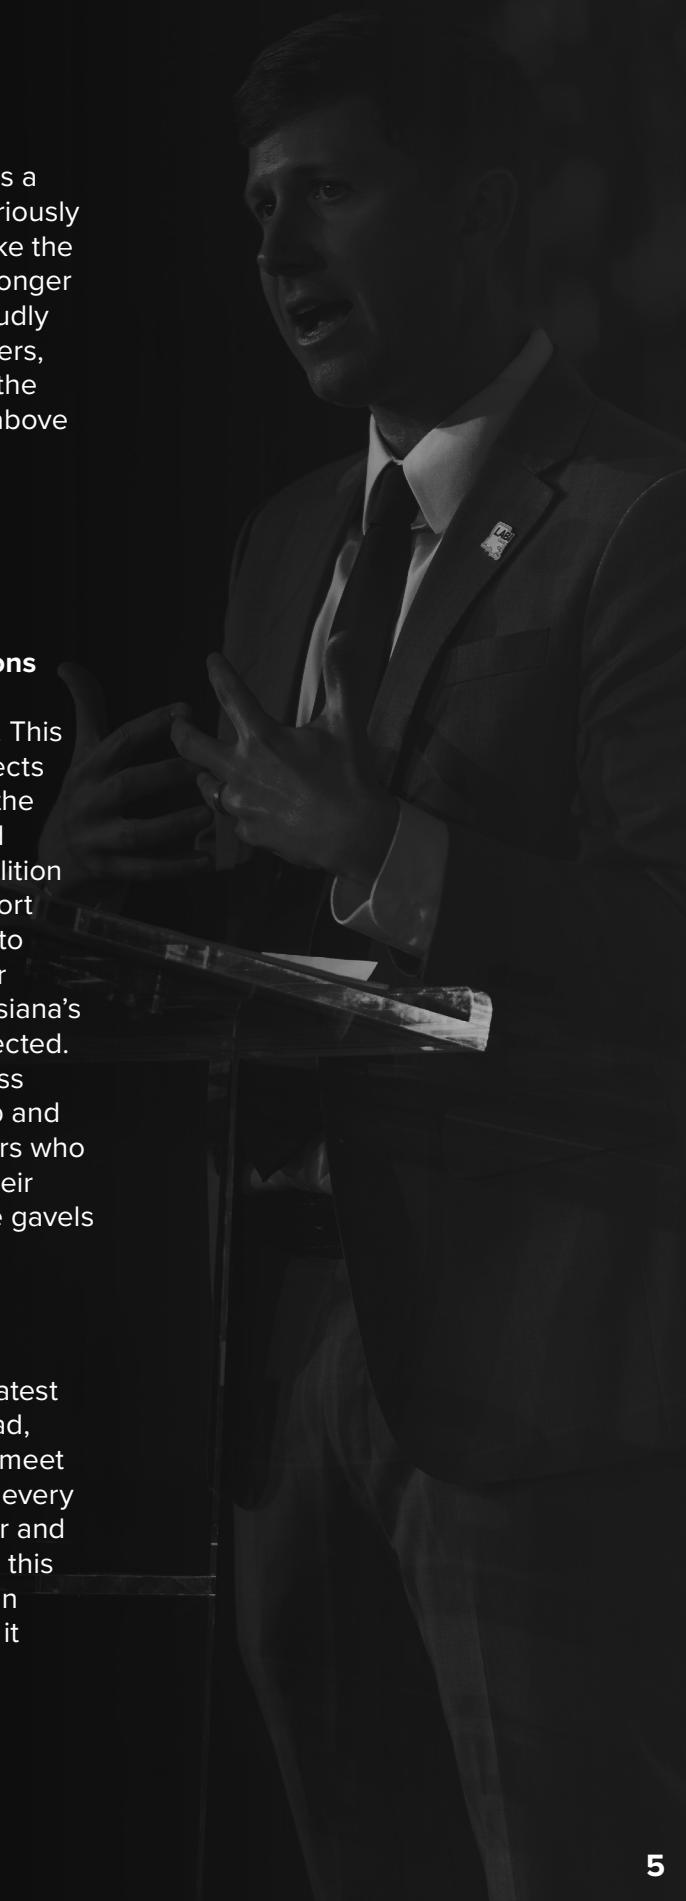

For 46 years, the LABI Scorecard has stood as more than a record of votes. It is a public account of how seriously Louisiana's lawmakers take the business of building a stronger state. This year, LABI proudly recognizes 90 policymakers, more than 60 percent of the Legislature, who scored above 80 percent on LABI's pro-growth platform:

- 52 Most Valuable Policymakers
- 16 All-Stars
- 22 Honorable Mentions

That is not a coincidence. This level of achievement reflects strong leadership within the Capitol and the sustained work of LABI and our coalition to recruit, elect and support policymakers committed to following through on their promises to support Louisiana's competitiveness once elected. It is the result of a business community that shows up and engages, and of legislators who understood the weight their votes carry, long after the gavels come down.

We have turned years of frustration into fuel for progress. Louisiana's greatest opportunities still lie ahead, and LABI will be there to meet them. We are grateful for every legislator, business leader and partner who helped build this foundation, and we remain committed to building on it together. ●

CIVIL JUSTICE

Louisiana has a pivotal window ahead. Boardrooms across the nation are taking notice and maintaining that momentum will require policymakers to stay the course. LABI will continue working to advance policies that support job creators, workers and their families and keep our state Going for Growth.

— WILL GREEN
OPENING WEEK OF SESSION

THE HISTORIC LEGAL reform victories of 2025 set a new standard for what Louisiana's legislature could achieve on civil justice. With landmark changes to the state's comparative fault framework, medical billing transparency and litigation abuse already signed into law, LABI entered the 2026 session focused on building on that progress and addressing key reforms that remained unfinished.

Unfortunately, our success bred apathy and hardened our opposition. As a result, the push to keep moving Louisiana's legal system toward greater fairness, predictability and alignment with other competitive states met swift and organized resistance. Most LABI-supported reform measures never received committee hearings and debate was foreclosed before it began. Of the reform bills that did move, just three were heard by the House Civil Law and Procedure Committee. Two passed the House, but only one of those was scheduled for a hearing in Senate Judiciary A. That is where this year's civil justice reform efforts ended.

One of LABI's primary goals aimed to tackle a long-standing issue in Louisiana's civil justice system: how future medical awards are handled after a lawsuit. The organization sponsored legislation that would have created a more responsible, patient-focused approach designed to ensure injured individuals maintain reliable access to long-term care while reducing the risk that funds are misused or exhausted prematurely. LABI's proposal would have placed those funds into dedicated CARE Accounts—money market accounts reserved for medical expenses—helping to bring more accountability to the justice system.

Another LABI-backed measure would have brought more accountability and oversight into our legal system by prohibiting outcome-based compensation for expert witnesses while continuing to allow standard payment for their time and professional expertise. The measure also sought to strengthen judicial gatekeeping by requiring judges to evaluate an expert's reliability and neutrality before testimony reaches a jury, aligning Louisiana more closely with widely adopted standards.

LABI also supported legislation to establish reasonable limits on general damages, while preserving meaningful compensation for those who are injured. The measure was intended to address excessive and unpredictable awards that can contribute to higher insurance costs for Louisiana families and businesses, while providing greater consistency and predictability in damage awards.

Both of these reforms were blocked by the upper chamber. The result is disappointing, but it clarifies the challenge ahead. Meaningful legal reform is not the work of a single legislative session—it is a sustained effort to overcome entrenched interests that have spent decades shaping Louisiana's litigation environment to their advantage. The victories of 2025 proved that change is possible when the business community is united and engaged with lawmakers unwilling to accept the status quo. The inaction of the 2026 session proved the opposition is organized, the resistance is real and the legal reform movement must answer with even greater discipline, urgency and resolve.

Louisiana's civil justice system still imposes burdens on employers, consumers and families that we cannot afford to ignore. These burdens are reflected in higher prices, fewer opportunities, weaker investment and a business climate that remains more challenging than it should be. LABI will return to this fight—in committee rooms, on the House and Senate floors, and in every conversation with lawmakers—to help make clear what is at stake. A fair, transparent and predictable legal system is not a narrow special interest priority. It is the foundation of a functioning economy and the Louisiana we all deserve. ●

At the end of the day, this is about fairness. People should be compensated for real harm, but not every car accident should come with an automatic payout, especially when it puts our local businesses at risk.

WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

IF ANY ISSUE DEFINED THE

2026 Regular Legislative Session, it was workforce development—and rightfully so. With more than $120 billion in new capital investment headed to Louisiana, the pressure to build and train a workforce equal to that opportunity has never been greater. This session, lawmakers rose to the challenge, advancing innovative, bipartisan solutions to grow, retrain and upskill Louisiana's workforce and connect more citizens to the high-wage, in-demand careers that new and expanding industries are providing.

At the center of this effort is Louisiana Works (LAWorks), the state's primary workforce agency. LABI fought to strengthen LAWorks' capacity and coherence, because a fragmented system cannot deliver the integrated results employers need. Lawmakers approved legislation enabling LAWorks to use federal Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) waivers to fully execute its "One Door" initiative, streamlining the certification of one-stop centers and enabling the consolidation or restructuring of local workforce development boards to better align training and accountability and to improve coordination and efficiency statewide.

LABI also supported the establishment of the Office of Business Workforce Solutions within LAWorks, a dedicated division within the department to align state workforce programs directly with employer and labor market needs, ensuring that training and investments track where jobs actually are.

Perhaps the most significant new tool for employers is the Bayou Growth Opportunity Workforce Program (BayouWorks), legislation LABI spearheaded from concept to passage. The BayouWorks legislation set up the mechanism that will eventually award competitive grants to small and mid-sized businesses to upgrade and expand their talent pipelines through partnerships with qualified training providers. Together with the LAWorks reforms, BayouWorks creates an interconnected framework designed to produce measurable workforce outcomes—not just more programs on paper.

HIGHER EDUCATION

A LIGNING LOUISIANA'S higher education system with the demands of a 21st-century economy remained a central LABI priority this session, and lawmakers made meaningful progress on several fronts.

A shortage of qualified instructors at community and technical colleges has limited industry's ability to train workers for high-wage and high-demand jobs. LABI supported the Workforce Instructor Capacity Investment Program to remove that bottleneck by expanding instructor capacity, ensuring the pipeline of trained workers can scale to meet employer demand. Additional measures expanded eligibility for TOPS Tech, created a workforce alignment dashboard to improve transparency and accountability across training programs, and streamlined the dual enrollment process to increase student access to postsecondary and career preparation opportunities.

Broader higher education reform efforts stalled early in the legislative session—a reminder that structural change at that scale requires sustained coalition-building across multiple legislative cycles. But several LABI-supported bills and resolutions laid important groundwork. These measures direct the Board of Regents, Louisiana Works, and other state agencies to rigorously evaluate existing higher education programs, student demographics, institutional offerings, and ensuring future public investments are driven by economic need, not institutional inertia.

K-12

are defying decades of low expectations, and the data proves it. In May, Harvard University, Stanford University and Dartmouth College released a national academic scorecard showing Louisiana ranked first among all states in reading growth and second in math. More significantly, Louisiana is the only state where the average student performance has surpassed 2019 pre-pandemic levels in both subjects. These results reflect years of disciplined reform focused on evidence-based literacy and math screeners, targeted student interventions and sustained investment in teacher training.

With that foundation in place, the 2026 session turned attention to what comes next: translating academic achievement into career readiness. LABI supported legislation introducing career-exploration learning for elementary students and strengthening career pathway requirements in middle school building the habit of connecting education to employment as early as possible. A landmark achievement this session was passage of the Learn and Earn Act, which authorizes partnerships between school systems and employers to expand work-based learning opportunities for students,

We start exposing [students] to high-demand, high-wage, high-impact jobs as early as possible, by giving them activities, by giving them exposure, by giving them access to the jobs and opportunities that we're going to have right here in Louisiana so that they don't have to look at other states.

— REP. KIM CARVER IN THE HOUSE EDUCATION COMMITTEE

creating structured pathways from classroom to career.

LABI also backed efforts to expand educational choice and widen access to career-focused learning. A new law allows vocational and technical charter schools to apply directly to the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education (BESE) for Type 2 charter authorization, streamlining approval and expanding access to programs aligned with high-demand industries. A separate measure that would have modernized charter school conversion elections fell short, not on the merits but because opponents repeatedly mischaracterized this a straightforward proposal to apply the same voting standard used in every other Louisiana election.

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION

ACCCESS TO QUALITY early childhood education is both an education and workforce issue. More than one in four Louisiana parents who are not in the labor force cite the cost or availability of childcare as the primary reason they cannot work. That is not a parenting problem; it is an economic one, and its consequences ripple through every sector of our state's economy.

LABI continues to prioritize early childhood education because the connection between quality early learning, workforce participation, and long-term economic competitiveness is direct and well-documented. This session, LABI supported legislation extending Louisiana's student identification system into pre-kindergarten and early learning programs—a structural reform that will improve data collection, sharpen program evaluation and create greater continuity in tracking student outcomes from the earliest years of development through K-12 and beyond. Better data means smarter investments, and smarter investments mean more children arriving at kindergarten ready to learn and more parents able to participate fully in the workforce.

REENTRY

A HIGH-PERFORMING workforce cannot be built by leaving a significant portion of the available population behind. Each month, between 900 and 1,200 individuals are released from Louisiana prisons. Research is clear: stable employment is among the strongest predictors of successful reintegration. Louisiana job creators are increasingly stepping up, creating opportunities for justice-involved individuals that simultaneously meet workforce needs, reduce recidivism and strengthen communities.

This session, LABI partnered on legislation establishing a structured women's reentry pilot program for a limited number of female parolees—a targeted, evidence-informed approach that expands opportunities while maintaining accountability. Several additional LABI-supported reforms did not advance, but the work continues. LABI remains committed to ensuring every individual leaving state or local correctional custody has proper identification upon release—a basic prerequisite for employment—and to expanding Louisiana's proven reentry court model, which has demonstrated measurable results in reducing repeat offenses and helping participants achieve lasting stability. ●

If we prepare people before the release, they will succeed after release.

— REP. BARBARA FREIBERG

We're seeing a lot of bills this session in response to the economic investment that's coming to Louisiana, and the K-12 system is on the front lines... it's great to have all this investment, but if we don't have the workforce to support it, where does that leave us?

— MARY BETH DERRICKSON

ENERGY & ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

There's a reason that the federal government grants primacy to states and not to parishes and counties. The Department of Conservation and Energy has the resources and the expertise that parishes do not. They have a predictable process; processes that are efficient and ensure that projects are done safely.

— PATRICK ROBINSON IN OPPOSITION TO HB 5

LOUISIANA HAS BEEN THE nation's energy backbone for more than a century. Protecting that position—and expanding it—drove LABI's energy agenda in 2026. The stakes were high: carbon capture and sequestration represents one of the most consequential economic opportunities in Louisiana's recent history, with billions in capital investment and tens of thousands of jobs contingent on the state maintaining a stable, predictable regulatory environment that makes those projects viable.

Opponents spent much of the session trying to dismantle that environment. LABI and its coalition partners defeated proposals to prohibit the use of eminent domain for CCS pipeline development statewide—which would have contradicted current broad-based state law regarding landowner protections—and blocked “local option” election schemes designed to fracture unified state regulatory authority into a parish-by-parish obstacle course. Those proposals would have sent investment, tax dollars and jobs to other states. LABI ensured these measures did not advance.

Shifting from defense to offense, LABI and its energy partners championed passage of the Louisiana Energy Protection Act, which preempts the wave of climate liability lawsuits now spreading across other states. The reach of that litigation extends well beyond energy companies, threatening farmers, ranchers, truckers, manufacturers and the communities that depend on them. The new law draws a clear line: Louisiana's businesses and investors will not be subjected to activist-driven litigation untethered from existing law, while industry's obligation to comply with current permits and regulatory requirements remains fully intact.

LABI also supported legislation affirming that jurisdiction over Louisiana's natural resources rests with the Department of Conservation and Energy, not with political subdivisions or local governing bodies. Fragmented local authority would replace certainty with delay, invite obstruction at every turn and push capital toward states with clearer rules, uniform oversight and the institutional resolve to defend major investment. The principle is straightforward and essential: on matters as consequential as energy development and natural resource management, Louisiana must speak with one voice. LABI and our industry partners will continue to fight as one voice to maintain Louisiana's standing as the global leader in energy. ○

You want to allow every parish to make a decision that's going to bottleneck the process, we're losing out on billions of dollars to Texas and Mississippi because we want to hold a process up.

— REP. TRAVIS JOHNSON IN OPPOSITION TO HB 5

LOUISIANA HEADS OFF GROWING TREND OF "CLIMATE LAWFARE"

According to S&P Global Ratings, 'the overall volume of climate litigation has increased exponentially over the past 10 years.' While much of this pseudo-industry is complex and operating nefariously, the numbers tell the story:

Suits were filed in 75 jurisdictions in 2023, up from 24 in 2017

TAXATION & FINANCE

DID YOU KNOW?

 #31 Overall 2026 State Tax Competitiveness Index

Tax Foundation

 Louisiana eliminated the uncompetitive franchise tax in 2025

 Louisiana remains one of only nine states to fully tax inventory

 Louisiana businesses must navigate more than 50 local tax collectors and 100+ tax rates due to the state's outdated collection system

LOUISIANA WAS IN A general legislative session in 2026, which by constitutional design restricts new taxes, tax increases and modifications to exemptions, credits or deductions. That structural constraint limited the fiscal agenda, but it did not limit LABI's engagement on fiscal policy and tax administration matters that directly affect Louisiana employers, and it did not stop meaningful progress.

Louisiana remains the only state in the country without centralized sales and use tax collection—a distinction that costs businesses time, money and administrative capacity. LABI promoted a constitutional amendment to establish a single, unified filing system for sales taxes, which would align Louisiana with every other state and create a more consistent, efficient and accountable process. LABI member companies continue to express mounting frustrations with the costly administrative burdens and patchwork solutions, such as the newly implemented parish e-filing system for local tax remittance. This, while local officials defend a system administered by 50 separate collectors applying more than 100 different tax rates across the state.

However, the 2026 session saw previously deferential lawmakers challenge local officials over whether this status quo collection system actually serves the public interest. While the measure was ultimately deferred voluntarily, it will return. The momentum is building. The business case is airtight and the legislative appetite for reform is growing.

I ran for office because we need to bring business to our state. We're going to solve no problems unless we bring in more commerce and tax base.

— REP. ROGER WILDER
ON CENTRALIZED SALES TAX

LABI also supported legislation providing local taxing authorities greater flexibility to adjust property tax millage rates following the quadrennial reassessment cycle, not just in the year immediately following reassessment as current law requires. This commonsense fix would prevent local governments from reflexively setting high millage rates to hedge against costs that may never materialize, providing meaningful relief to property taxpayers and businesses.

On fiscal accountability, lawmakers approved a LABI-supported expansion of the inspector general's office, broadening its investigative mandate to identify and eliminate wasteful spending, improve government efficiency and modernize state operations. Separately, LABI backed proposals to establish a long-term state general fund expenditure limit that would have directed surplus revenues into an income tax elimination fund—a structural reform aimed at building a more sustainable and competitive tax environment for Louisiana. Those measures did not cross the finish line this session, but they represent exactly the kind of bold fiscal thinking LABI will continue to champion for Louisiana's business community.

In a state working to grow jobs and investment, the question I have for you this morning is, how long are we going to make it unnecessarily difficult for businesses to succeed here?

— REP. JOSH CARLSON ON CENTRALIZED SALES TAX

EMPLOYEE RELATIONS

LOUISIANA EMPLOYERS pay some of the highest workers' compensation (WC) premiums in the nation, not because their workplaces are unusually dangerous, but because the system surrounding workplace injuries is broken. Despite historically low workplace injury rates, claims costs in Louisiana run more than double those of many neighboring states, driven by an outdated medical fee schedule, excessive charges billed by some healthcare facilities at rates untethered from market reality and a dispute process that too often rewards litigation over resolution and the employee's return to work.

The 2026 session marked an important step toward correcting these systemic issues. LABI worked with legislators and stakeholders to assemble a reform package targeting three pressure points: medical care delivery and reimbursement, disability benefit duration, and dispute resolution. Many of those provisions were consolidated into legislation by Sen. Brach Myers.

The new law modernizes medical billing and utilization review and, critically, directs the Office of Workers' Compensation Administration to collect payment data and report to the Legislature before the 2029 session, including side-by-side comparisons to reimbursement models in peer states. It is not an immediate fix, but it establishes a clear, legislatively mandated path toward the first meaningful fee schedule overhaul in nearly 30 years. The legislation also revitalizes the preliminary determination process to resolve disputes faster and at lower cost. Combined with a separate LABI-supported measure by Rep. Emily Chenevert granting employers full access to the workers' compensation court system, these reforms represent meaningful progress toward a more equitable and efficient process for employers and employees alike.

Beyond workers' compensation, LABI secured passage of legislation affirming the right of public employees to immediately stop payroll deductions for union dues—eliminating the restrictive enrollment windows that had effectively trapped workers in membership decisions they wanted to reverse. LABI also helped pass the Independent Contractor Voluntary Portable Benefits Act, which acknowledges the realities of Louisiana's evolving labor market by allowing independent contractors to establish portable benefits accounts that they and those who hire them may voluntarily fund for health insurance, disability coverage and other protections historically unavailable to "gig workers."

LABI also successfully held the line, defeating multiple proposals to impose a state minimum wage and blocking efforts to weaken WC utilization review requirements and disrupt the vocational rehabilitation process for injured workers.

Not every priority crossed the finish line, but the 2026 session saw LABI fight to move Louisiana's workplace policy agenda in the right direction. Lawmakers confronted long-standing cost drivers in the workers' compensation system, strengthened worker choice, modernized benefit options for "gig workers" and rejected proposals that would have made Louisiana less competitive. ○

The gig economy is here, it's real, it's growing. It is where our young people are looking to go. They like the freedom, the flexibility. I would note that Louisiana is below the national average in terms of labor participation, and I think this is part of it, is that individuals have that desire, they need that flexibility in their schedules. We think this legislation is beneficial to give them a way to provide benefits for themselves that they don't have access to otherwise.

— SEN. BRACH MYERS ON SB 408

TECHNOLOGY

THE RAPID RISE OF artificial intelligence and other emerging technologies reshaped the 2026 legislative session in ways few anticipated, producing a wave of state-level regulatory proposals that required LABI to spend significant time and resources playing defense.

Louisiana was not alone. Across the country, states are moving quickly—sometimes faster than their understanding of the technology—to impose regulatory frameworks on AI systems and digital platforms. The instinct to act is understandable. But the result of uncoordinated state-by-state regulation is a patchwork of inconsistent requirements that drives up compliance costs, introduces legal uncertainty and puts states that overreach at a competitive disadvantage in attracting and retaining technology-dependent businesses.

Technology regulation of this scope and complexity belongs at the federal level. A uniform national framework would provide the legal clarity and regulatory consistency that responsible AI development requires. It prevents businesses from navigating a maze of conflicting standards across state lines, and it gives innovators—including Louisiana's growing technology sector—the certainty they need to invest, hire and grow. LABI successfully pushed back on the most burdensome proposals this session and will remain a consistent voice for a rational, federal-first approach as this policy debate accelerates in the years ahead. ●

LA DRIVEN PRIORITIES

LABI'S LA DRIVEN Strategic Plan continues to drive results. Of the more than 800 bills LABI tracked during the 2026 Legislative Session for their impact on Louisiana's business climate, 50 measures that advanced into law or resolution were designated as LA Driven-Approved, each one rooted in the bipartisan LA Driven Legislative Agenda that grew out of LABI's LA23 Strategic Plan. Taken together, these new laws and resolutions represent concrete progress on the priorities that matter most to Louisiana's long-term competitiveness: attracting jobs and investment, expanding the workforce, and creating opportunities for citizens of every age.

The numbers are beginning to reflect that effort. One of the central challenges identified in LABI's 2025 LA Driven Annual Report was increasing labor force participation, the share of working-age Louisianans who are employed or actively seeking work. It is a foundational measure of economic health, and Louisiana has historically underperformed compared to its regional neighbors and the nation. New data released in July signals a meaningful shift. Louisiana tied for the largest year-over-year increase in labor force participation in the country, rising from 57.9 percent to 58.8 percent and adding nearly 33,000 workers to the state's active labor force. Policy reform is producing economic results. This is what that looks like.

Education and workforce development dominated the LA Driven agenda this session, and for good reason. Lawmakers approved legislation expanding instructor capacity at community and technical colleges in high-demand fields, created earlier and more frequent career exploration opportunities for students at every level, and established BayouWorks, an innovative employer-driven training grant program that puts workforce investment decisions in the hands of the businesses that need results. A separate measure authorizes SOWELA Technical Community College to partner with a local school system on a pilot program expanding awareness of and access to high-demand technical credentials, a model worth watching and replicating.

Lawmakers also adopted a resolution establishing the Anchor Home Task Force to study tax credit mechanisms that would encourage Louisiana college graduates to remain in the state and enter the workforce after earning their degrees. Talent retention is one of Louisiana's most persistent competitive liabilities, and this initiative directly addresses a core LA Driven recommendation.

The LA Driven agenda is not a wish list. It is a data-driven roadmap, built by LABI in partnership with employers, economists, and policy experts, and revisited each year to reflect what the evidence says Louisiana needs to compete. Every legislative measure designated LA Driven-Approved has been vetted against that roadmap, which means lawmakers are not just passing individual bills. They are systematically executing a long-term strategy for growth, one session at a time. That distinction matters. It is the difference between isolated legislative wins and a coordinated, sustained effort to change the trajectory of Louisiana's economy, and it is why LABI tracks LA Driven's progress: so that businesses, legislators and citizens alike can see not just what was done, but whether it is working. This session, the evidence says it is. ●

This is to get people trained quickly. This is an opportunity for the business community to come together to get people and the jobs that we specifically need filled.

VOTING RECORD CRITERIA

There are certain rules that consistently apply to LABI voting records and LABI’s use of those records:

Only key business votes are included. Only bills on which LABI has taken a clear, broad-based position are considered.

A vote may be on an amendment or procedural motion, as well as on final passage, if that vote was crucial to the fate of the bill.

Because of factors such as committee action or amendments, the inclusion of a vote on a bill in one chamber does not necessarily mean it will be a record vote in the other chamber.

Votes are often weighted according to their importance to the business community.

The annual and cumulative voting averages are based on the number of points actually earned compared to the number of points that could have been earned during the period.

Legislators are not penalized in LABI voting records for absences due to personal or family medical leave or an equally necessary reason.

The voting record is based on printouts from the House and Senate voting machines and on personal privilege corrections.

THE METHODOLOGY

A check indicates the legislator voted with LABI’s position on a bill.

An X indicates the legislator voted opposite of LABI’s position on a bill. An X will deduct from their overall score.

An A indicates an excused absence or that a legislator was absent when LABI did not need their support. An A will not deduct from their overall score.

An A- indicates that the legislator was absent when LABI needed their support on a vote. An A- will deduct from their overall score.

Note: If a legislator was not present and voting for at least 80% of LABI’s scorable votes, the legislator will not receive a score. Points earned this year will be carried over to future Scorecards and will be factored into cumulative scores.
